BEN BOWIE

ANALYST

Ben Bowie is an Analyst with the Telemus Group. He supports wargames and workshops, and provides analytic and research support for assessments pertaining to the future force design of advanced militaries.

Prior to joining Telemus, Mr. Bowie interned with the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments (CSBA) where he worked on various projects including an assessment of United States airbase vulnerability in the Western Pacific, a study to update aircraft dispersal techniques based on NATO experiences during the Cold War, and a historical study of DARPA technology transition. He also served as a Defense Intern for Congressman J. Randy Forbes, the former Chairman of the House Seapower and Projection Forces Subcommittee. There he undertook analysis concerning future fleet architecture and surface warfare capabilities.

Mr. Bowie holds his BA in History and Middle Eastern Studies from the University of Virginia.
